THE JURY STAND TEN TO TWO. te.

Before Judge Garvin.

The interest taken by the public in the prolonged and interesting trial of the divorce suit of Strong against Strong manifested itself yesterday in the anxiety with which the rendition of a verdict was awaited. The subject was the topic of conversation everywhere throughout the city, and the precincts of the City Hall Park and the ion, were invaded at an early hour yesterday morning y those who were desirous of anticipating the result in dvance of the usual sources of information, the pub-

THE DELIBERATION DURING PRIDAY NIGHT. Our reporter, after his zealous vigil of Friday night, returned at an early hour yesterday to the vicinity of the Superior Court room, Part 1, and there found that the jury, though in the apartment, were still "out." An occasional glimpse through the doors, as the officers of the court passed in and out to replenish the revealed them in a quiescent state. Many were recumbent in the arm chairs, inclined to somnolency, while others perused the slip of

From this time until near moon the jury remain closeted within the court room, but, outwardly, "an no sign." As the foremoon waned the curious flocked the lobby, and numerous were the interrogatories a dressed to the sentinel officers who kept watch at a portals of the jury chamber. Surprise was universal the protracted deliberation of the jury, and those of hearandous disposition were disposed to venture ways.

As the attendants of the court occasionally passed in and out momentary glimptes of the jury in defiberation were afforded those who were anxious enough to watch. At one time they were in close proximity to each other, evidently in earnest disconsion. Again the opening of the door revealed them scattered about the room, scated here and there, like clerks in a dry goods store on a duit day, some with their thate on, others with their feet elevated upon the stove, others again near the window permising the papers, a few smoking and others again whittling away in true Yankee furbion. Some occupied catinly, whittled into a litter near the slove.

A COMMOTION.

About half-pest eleven A. M. the jury communicated their desire to see the Judge, who was accordingly sout for. During the morning he occupied the adjoining office of the District Attorney, where also were in waiting Meastra McKeon and Gerry, of the counsel for the defence, and Mr. John Austing Stevens, Jr. Mr. Strong and his counsel, Meastra Cram and Robinson, walted in the General Term room of the Superior Coart. The interfew of the Judge with the jury was very brief. They desired an Stplanation as to one of the points of his charge in reference to condustion. He accordingly gave the requisite explanation, and the jufy were Igain left to their deliberations.

THE JURY DESIRE INFORMATION.

About two o'clock, in obedience to a request from the jury, the Judge again entered the room. The court having been opened and the names of the jury called, Judge Garvin, in response to the question which had been saked of him, said:—Gentlemen, I charged you this morning as to the second question of the isques, and I repeat it now, that counsel may take exception if they wish. I charged distinctly what forgiveness meant; that it consisted in restoration to marital rights and of a reunion of the parties, and must be proved by express proof or voluntary consbitation between the parties, with knowledge of the fact. The definition includes accural intercourse, unless there be any absolute physical reason against it. Is there my question of law on which you wish the be informed?

Juryman Worstel—We are all agreed, your Honer, as to the mattern of law. We only differ about the evidence. Our difference is in reference to the credibility of witnesses.

Judge Garvin—That is solely for you to decide upon.

agreed except as to the two last questions.

THE JUNY STAND TEN TO TWO.

JUTYMIN LONG—YOUR HONS, it is, impossible to agree.
We stand now as we stood yesterday at two o'clock. There are ten on one side and two on the other. We can't agree. I cannot stop longer, and I ask your Honor to discharge me. I have given this case as much attention as I have to my own business. I am sick, and wish you to discharge me. I countder I have done my duty. I think there is no chance of our agreeing.

Some of the other Juyors here expressed their willingness to remain and try again to obtain an agreement, and the Judge said that in view of such a manifestation ho would leave them to still further deliberate, and accordingly the room was again cleared, and ordingly the room was again cleared, and

THE JURY LOCKED UP ONCE MORE.

The time passed wearily until half-pout three o'clock, when the Judge was again sent for by the jury. This time the request was for the original of the letter written by Mr. Strong to Mrs. Potter in reference to the bad, one dollar and five dollar notes.

Mr. Cram said he had a copy of the letter.

The jury desired the original.

Mr. Gerry said the original was among his exhibits, and was at his house.

Mr. Gerry agreed to go for it and sand it in through the Judge. He secondingly weat for the desired docu-the Judge was again sent for and took bis seat.

One of the jury men wished to inquire of his Honor as to the opinion held by one of the dissenting members, viz:—that on such deficient evidence as had been presented be would not have found a man guilty of murder or burglary, but he would of adultery.

mained waiting for the verdict.

"THE TWELVE GOOD MEN AND TRUE."

It has been universally remarked by all who have wit nessed the jury and understand the character of their deliberations that a more faithful, zealest and earnest body has never assembled to dejustice between litigants. They have conducted their investigations with apparently the utmos desire to assertain the right of the cause in dispute, and they have been at this time of writing thirty-sever hours in deliberation. They have been absent from their house since Friday morning last, and at a time when remions are so wished for in the Jamily circle. As an instance of the annoyances which they are undergoing it may be stated that vesterday a messenger came from the wife of one of the jurymen to say that there was no provision for the Sunday or the New Year's dinner, but the inexorable mandate of the law forbale communication.

The names and occupations of the juryers are as follows:—

Job Long, distiller, 191 West Thirty survests street, Francis Borke, merchant, 577 Second at enter. Nathaniel C. Boutz, shoe dealer, 101 Eighth avenue. John P. Worstel, agent, 254 Broadway.
Wm. R. Smith, merchant, 111 West Forty-fourth at Wilkes Gay, clerk, 21 Perry street.
J. J. Selder, mouldings, 311 West Twenty-fifth sirvet. Robert Mackle, merchant, 237 West Fourth street.
J. N. Sickels, pattern maker, 753 Washington street. Charles Berry, butter dealer, 321 Washington Market, John T. Willets, merchant, 236 Pearl street.
Our reporter desires to mention the name of Mr. Spencer, the clerk of Part I of the Seperior Court, to whom, as well as the gentlemon mentioned yesterday, he is indebted for many courtesies during the trial.

A bulletin from our reporter, dated at the New Court House, three o'clock, Sunday morning, says:

The jury have not yet agreed. They are still in earness discussion. Cushions and mattresses have been provided for the convenience of those who may wish to sleep during the night.

was arrested by detective Farley, on the charge of having stolen a diamond ring, valued at $200, from Charles Votsy, of 64 Fulton street. It is alleged that on the 20th inst., as the parties were passing through Houston street, accompanied by some friends, the prisoner asked to see Votey's ring, and, after obtaining possession of it, disappeared with the property. It appeared that Winter the next day called on Richard Van Houten, or 109 Eighth avenue, and soid him the ring for $200. The accused, who is a commission merchant, was taken before Justice Dodge, and held for trial in default of $1,000, bail. Winter is a native of Georgia.

At an early hour yesterday Mr. John M. Oliver, residing at No. 92 Broome street, while near his residence, was met by Michael Alwell, Edward Noian and two other persons. They hovered about him until Alwell, as charged, thrust his hand into Oliver's pocket and forcibly stole therefrom a small amount of money, Noian at the same time threatening to kill their victim if he gave an alarm. The highwaymen then fied, fellowed by Oliver, who caused Alwell's arrest by officer Coleman, of the Thirteenth precinct. The others made their escape. At four o'clock yesterday morning, John Hood, of No. 8 Jackson street, hearing a noise in his barn, jumped out of bed, and saw a man escaping from the premises. Mr. Hood succeeded in arresting the fugilive, who proved to be Edward Noian, engaged in the robbery of Mr. Oliver but a few hours previously. Measures have been taken to produce for the purpose the church deduce in Forty-first atreet, near the corner of Sixth avenue, heretofore occupied by an Independent Methodist church, most of the members of which expect to enter the new

This new Catholic church was opened for service of This new Catholic church was opened for service of Sunday last, when a middight or Christmas mass was colebrated. The corner stone was laid June 5, 1864, and the edifice just completed is one of the largest and post beguitful in the county. It is one hundred and withly feet deep by sixty-one in width, and is lighted by sixteen stained glass windows, each coaling two hundred dollars. The channel window is the most beautiful piece of stained glass in the county. In the centre of it is a figure of St. Augustine, life sure. This window cost one thousand dollars. On either side of the channel window are statues of St. Nicholas, of Tolentine and St. Monica. Thus figures are exquisitely wrought bas-reliefs, and are seven and a half feet in height. The church will seat one thousand persons. The total cost of the church is thirty thousand dollars.

Next Sunday (January 7) has been named by the Con tenary Committee for observance by the Methodists of tenary committee for observance by the methodata of this country as a "day of special and united prayer for the divine blessing upon the centenary service of the year, and for a general revival of religion, that the cen-tenary year may prove to be an epoch in the spiritual progress of the Church."
